Commenting on this, Renschler said: "I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Pachta-Reyhofen most sincerely for his many years of dedicated service. I look forward to my new role at MAN Diesel & Turbo. I value the expertise of our colleagues in power engineering and maritime propulsion technology. The diesel engine remains a key technology in global trade and transportation logistics. It links the company to our commercial vehicle brands. There is also close collaboration involved in the research and development of future technologies."
