In its publication, MAN delivers a positive assessment after three years of pursuing a CR strategy. The company is, for instance, able to announce success in reducing CO<sub>2</sub> emissions at its 31 production sites, these having been lowered by 5% since 2008. The climate strategy drawn up by the MAN Group envisages reducing the emission of greenhouse gas by as much as 25% by 2020. For the first time, the CR Report includes information on the progress made along this path.

The key issue addressed in the report is however MAN's efforts to enhance the future for its customers by, for instance, presenting innovative solutions for sustainable transport in the urban areas of the future. The Euro VI technology used in its new TG models already guarantees virtually zero-pollution operation of commercial vehicles. Priority is now being given to the vehicles' CO<sub>2</sub> emissions. In the area of Power Engineering, the report presents, among other things, products using renewable energy as drivers for more climate protection and introduces MAN technology for the aftertreatment of exhaust gas emitted by large ships.

Efficiency and emission reduction are among the key developments targeted by MAN. But in spite of all the high-tech, its CR endeavors are all focused on people. This was made clear by Jochen Schumm, Chief Human Resources Officer at MAN SE and MAN Truck & Bus AG, during the presentation held in the Munich Truck Forum: "None of our success would be possible without a top team made up of excellent staff members. Our employees are indeed the greatest lever in actively implementing entrepreneurial responsibility at MAN. To firmly anchor CR in our company,

The MAN Group is one of Europe's leading industrial players in transport-related engineering, with revenue of approximately €15.8 billion in 2012. As a supplier of trucks, buses, diesel engines, turbomachinery, and special gear units, MAN employs approximately 54,300 people worldwide. Its business areas hold leading positions in their respective markets.

we have to sensitize the top team, putting it in a position to assume responsibility for day-to-day activities.“ Sixty invited guests from the automobile and component industry, regional businesses, politics and customers met at MAN to enter into a dialogue on the subject of corporate responsibility.
